disturbed at this caucus action. They concede that it is a confession of weak-force a unity which does not in fact exist. It is a desperate expedient of an ambitious, chactic, hetrogeneous party, and seems more likely to disrupt than to unite the Democratic party. There are a few men from moderate districts in the north, like Holman, whose voices will not be stopped. Presidential aspirants, party necessities, or Tom Scott's blandishments, cannot control them. Thus the Democrats have put turned over the entire policy of their party to Mr. Lamar, an ex-Confederate. This action does not meet with univer-

DEMOCRATIC "FESTINA SEUTE" POLICY WASHINGTON, December 14 .- Neither house of congress evinces any desire to but it is not probable that any business make choice of one equally deserving of importance will be transacted before its suffrages, and as far rentoved from the third of January, the time set for the influence or power of cliques and Pinchback setial. It is a pity for his race (if a quadroon can be said to have a race) that Pinchback has not a more va.'d claim. In point of solid ability and the ready use of his faculties, I is one thing in which Douglas excels knows them both can doubt that Pinchback would make a more able representative of the interests of his State and country toan the namby-pamby carpet-bagger who is now the sole senstor from Louisiana. But the defect is in his claim, and, al though he will be powerfully supported by Logan and Morton, there is scarcely a chance for his securing a seat. The widely spread lear that the untried Democratic members would conduct themselves in a wild and whirling manner, making espital for their enemics, is yielding to a widely-spread confidence. The temperate good sense that has prevalled so far in almost every collequy and caucus, has gone far to produce the impression that the dominant wing of the forty-fourth congress has in it the promise of judicious legislation. Perhaps the very best proof that the major-ity has acted with wisdom so far, is the manifest versation of the enemy. The maxim in war, "Do nothing that the enemy desires you to do," seems equally applicable in politics. The Republicans have been foiled in every pass; in their factors in flavore the negative politics. effort to influence the nomination of the speaker; in the temperate, unsectional, toth parties. SOUTHERNERS DEFER TO THE NORTH-ERNERS. New York San. WASHINGTON, December 13 .- The Democratic caucus this afternoon was held to see whether some arrangement coud be made whereby the majority would be enabled to act with deliberation and concert on all important measures which might come before congress this winter. The utmost harmony prevailed, and a full and free discussion was had on the propriety of originating an advisory committee, to which should be referred all subjects of interest to the party. There was decided opposition shown to the policy of caucusing, and on every side members declared that they would never consent to surrender their individual opinions on questions that affected the general interests, and follow the behests of king caucus.
